Summary on July 1, 2016 edited by Joyce Hu:

1. “Why we work” is the theme set by Toastmaster of the evening Fernando while the table topic master Joe leads us to Marvel comics heroes and movies. The combination reminds us of work and leisure balancing.
2. Irene, General Evaluator gives a “specific” suggestion by recommending “POETS” sequence to introduce prepared speaker: P = Project level, O = Speech Objective, E = Name of individual evaluator, T = Speech Title/Time, S = The Speaker. Furthermore, contact the member earlier (not first sight at the scene when we are all busy on preparing our assignment/speech and extend our hospitality to the guest) to get more information for speaker’s credibility is a value-added.
3. Table topic master briefs the purpose of the session and time rules (if the timer didn’t introduce it previously) is necessary. Picks up member to answer the first question is the principle to start this exciting session. On the other hand, invite guest to answer the topics with his/her consent is the way to get the visitor involved.
4. Sunny is walking the extra mile when she starts the story of Snow White as a new beginning on her advance communicator track.. Kevin entertains us his profound analysis on “the toad and the swan” and he’s on his way to win his Advance Communicator Silver soon.
5. Our guest Bonnie uses “talk the talk, walk the walk”, slang of the day for her debut during table topic session. What a smart and brilliant performance.
6. Prepare and practice as much possible is the rule 101 bettering our communication and leadership skills.
